Folding plank dining table with satin nickel hardware, designed by Mar Silver

On the Mark

Interior designer Mar Silver unveils her new line of furniture.

A MAR SILVER HOME has a distinctly organic feel. The designer draws inspiration from the natural world, then brings in wood and steel textures for a masculine finish. But the market's lack of high-quality furniture that can balance such heavy homes sparked Silver to take matters into her own hands.—JANE KELLOGG

What do you think sets your furniture apart from other brands?

What I love about my furniture is that it's both masculine and feminine. What I wasn't generally seeing before were masculine designs that still have a gentle quality. The circular coffee table, for example, is a very solid-looking table, but the curves add that softness.

How has your partner, Michael Alpert, influenced the look of the furniture line?

Michael and I really complement each other's styles. He being an artist and I being a designer, we share a very similar vision, yet different. Michael is really able to translate on the end product what I visualize and create in my head. We've really found a common ground.

How are you incorporating the outdoors into the Westhampton Beach home you're working on?

The house really lends itself to nature. In this specific instance, it's about the water. I can certainly see the application of my furniture there, for sure.
